

Talk is cheap so I'd love to start a project and/or set up an interview to show you what I can do for you and your company. Coding is my passion so even amongst tight deadlines I enjoy the pressure and success of completing projects on time. My expertise is in development but I do enjoy adding my design skills and converting design prototypes to working code. While possessing the skills needed to hit the ground running, I collaborate well with developers/designers of all types and adapt to new technologies and ways of doing things to solve problems. I'm looking for a team of fun, motivated, and performant developers that I can grow with and continue to learn new things. I don't want to be another resume or cover letter, because I'm very interested in your company and want to contribute to its growth. Please see my portfolio as proof of my drive, work ethic, and experience. Thank You!
